

Attacking the Opioid Crisis

Stemming the flow and providing essential treatment

Prescription opioids serve a critical role in the treatment of post-surgical, chronic or cancer-related pain. However, the impacts of their misuse are devastating. Every day, more than 90 Americans die from overdosing on opioids.[1] The crisis is also creating a staggering economic burden through escalating health care costs, increased crime and lost productivity. Prescription opioid overdose, abuse and dependence carries high costs for American society—estimated at $95 billion.[2]

CareFirst has developed a holistic approach to combat this epidemic

- Restrict unnecessary or excessive opioid prescription use through formulary design.
- Monitor members and prescribers for drug safety, potential fraud, waste and abuse.
- Connect members with high-touch care coordination and essential treatment.
- Reduce financial barriers through a cost-share waiver.

The integration of medical care with behavioral health and substance abuse services has been a central objective of CareFirst's Total Care and Cost Improvement Program. CareFirst's comprehensive approach attacks the crisis holistically: restricting the amount of prescription opioids in circulation; monitoring for misuse and abuse; and getting members who are struggling with substance use disorder the help they need.

Formulary management to reduce excessive opioid prescription use

On an average day in the U.S., more than 650,000 opioid prescriptions are dispensed while over 1,000 people are treated in emergency departments for misusing prescription opioids.[3]

CareFirst's strategy to deter opioid misuse incorporates recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Guidelines for the Management of Chronic Pain. Our formularies (list of covered drugs) are intentionally designed to balance the lowest effective dose with the shortest duration of treatment. To reduce the likelihood of dependence, CareFirst sets limits on the strength of the dose and the length of prescriptions.

Drug safety and monitoring for fraud, waste and abuse

Nearly half of all U.S. opioid overdose deaths involved a prescription opioid, with a recent study showing people can become dependent on opioids in as few as three to five days.[4,5] Opioid abuse can have dangerous health impacts, potentially causing permanent damage to the brain, liver, heart and respiratory system. To protect members from serious or fatal consequences, CareFirst monitors member data for multiple prescribers/pharmacies, excessive use and high claims costs.

Once CareFirst identifies behavior patterns that signal possible misuse, pharmacists notify providers of the member's utilization history and work with them to outline and address concerns. CareFirst educates providers about pain medication treatment and how to recognize potential opioid misuse by members. As needed, members are referred for intensive case management and high-touch care coordination.

Additionally, to reduce costs associated with fraud and abuse, prescribers' pharmacy claims are also scanned for patterns that do not comply with established guidelines and further investigation is conducted with specific prescribers as needed.

Connecting members with essential treatment

Only one in 10 people with addiction to drugs and/or alcohol are diagnosed and receive treatment compared to 70 percent of people with hypertension or diabetes.[6] The stigma of addiction often prevents those suffering from substance use disorder from seeking treatment. CareFirst is committed to providing members with access to comprehensive treatments that support sustainable outcomes.

Since many members with addiction have co-occurring medical and behavioral health disorders, primary care providers, nurses and behavioral health providers refer those in need to our Behavioral Health and Substance Use Disorder Program. Through this program, members are assessed and connected to specially trained clinicians who work 1:1 with them to identify the right mental health providers; help schedule and follow up to appointments; and coordinate their overall care.

Effective recovery programs recognize addiction is not a personal failure, rather a chronic disease requiring long-term treatment options. For members dealing with substance use disorder, CareFirst is collaborating with a number of high performing addiction recovery centers. These centers are leaders in intensive outpatient programs, providing highly individualized treatment, including relapse prevention, coping strategies and evidence-based medication assisted therapy.

Licensed counselors work with members to identify triggers, establish a plan to manage them and develop new healthy habits.

Through outpatient treatment, members attend therapy sessions, appointments, meetings, or other recovery activities while remaining in their home or transitional housing environment. This option—which can be as effective as inpatient programs—allows them to keep up with day-to-day responsibilities while they continue their path to recovery.

Eliminating financial barriers to care

To relieve the financial burden associated with treatment and allow members to focus on getting better, CareFirst has implemented a cost-share waiver. Members admitted to, and who remain compliant with, an approved intensive outpatient program within select addiction recovery centers are eligible for a waiver of in-network cost-sharing responsibilities (no copays, coinsurance or deductibles) for eligible services.
